

CONNECT

Virtual Course

NL November Learning
November Learning

Join Instructor Alan November in

Increasing Student Motivation and Accountability in the Classroom and Online

Course Date | Sept. 7-Oct. 20, 2020

- Meeting times: Wednesday 8:00am EDT
- Secondary Educators Focus (6-12)
- Limited cohort size
- Graduate Credit Available

COURSE OVERVIEW

Supporting students to become self-directed and interdependent learners in both online and classroom is a key to their immediate and lifelong success.

Imagine if your students were:

Asking more meaningful questions; designing their own assignments; creating tutorials for classmates; engaging in peer to peer support; researching with an ability to question their results; providing self-assessment. In turn, imagine teachers who are: Learning more about how their students learn; saving enormous amounts of time; responding to the unique learning needs of each student; designing highly motivating assignments; broadening their repertoire of tools to support self-directed learning. At the end of the course, you will have created assignments that support your curriculum. This pedagogy of student empowerment works for both online and classroom settings. Various tools will be tools but it's not about tools.

CLICK HERE TO REGISTER